WANG Show-tao, alternate member of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee and member of the Central and South China Military and Administrative Committee, in expressing views in private talks with high officials of Central and South China Region, made the following statements:

- The United States was prolonging the Korean Peace talks in order to pressure other nations into signing the Japanese Peace Treaty submissively; to pressure the American Congress into passing a large military budget; to use the situation as a lever to obtain action it wanted on various Asiatic problems at the November meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations; and to minimize contradictions between United States policy and those of "subservient nations". The United States is prolonging the talks also to sucessfully complete the rearming of Western Germany; and to act as victors in suppres ing the Chinese and Korean peoples, with the aim of annexing Korean territory.
- b. Factors bearing on the use of Japanese troops in Korea are: The Japanese Peace Treaty has not yet been ratified by all the signing nations; the Japanese people are opposed to sending troops to Korea; invoking the Sino-Soviet Defense Pact would disturb the Americans; it takes time to place Japanese troops in the field.
- An international-Communist inspired campaign to oppose a separate Japan-United States treaty would provoke various reactions.
- d. The authorities of the Chinese Communist Party in Peiping have agreed that they desire a real peace, which will permit China to progress with its national defense and in economic reconstruction and which will permit Korean rehabilitation; that they desire a "resonable and peaceful solution" of Asiatic and other world problems; and that they are prepared for a long war if a peace in Korea cannot be gained to meet Chinese and Korean desires.

e. The Chinese Communist basic attitudes toward the Korean talks include: China and Korea cannot accept "humiliating" terms, since they are definitely not defeated; a military compromise must not compromise the "political significance" of a subsequent "reasonable" solution; in dealing with various specific problems the Chinese and Koreans must act with full love and righteousness which will clearly reveal to all peace-loving peoples the dreadful aspect of American imperialism; and the American imperialists do not dare openly to assume responsibility for breaking off the peace talks.
